There's a walkway that stretches for several kms alongside the coast of Puerto Del Carmen, the main destination on Lanzarote. At one point, it does take one past the runways of Arrecife (Lanzarote) airport terminal, close enough to the actual place exactly where arriving aircraft land so that it will a fantastic experience viewing them pass just a few meters over your head.

For this small island (merely fifty kilometers from very top to the bottom) there tend to be normally plenty of aeroplanes arriving as well as departing, for the reason that Lanzarote welcomes many visitors each month comparable to or greater than the actual size of its permanent inhabitants.

Despite the fact that those planes visit Lanzarote from a lot of countries, many flights daily bring visitors to the region from airports inside UK, such as:

- Birmingham
- Manchester (several with Jet 2) Newcastle as well as Leeds Bradford
- Luton and Stanstead (Easyjet not to mention Ryanair)
- Glasgow
- Cardiff, Bristol and Exeter
- Gatwick

Although Lanzarote is not really much more than a hundred or so kms off of the shore of Africa, and so comfy anytime, the nonstop flight time out of United kingdom is merely about four hours, which makes it a very alluring vacation destination for Uk visitors, specially because flight costs are usually affordable for this type of travel.
